

Plausible energy mix in a net-zero emissions world

Half of energy supply will come through electricity, up from current one fifth

Note: For a world with widespread prosperity, the energy system will double over the course of this century